

Dear Member of the European Parliament,

After the rejection of ACTA, we, citizens, felt the urge to share with you these pieces of the digital culture we are building everyday through the free, open, neutral and therefore universal Internet.

This USB Datalove key was financed in a “crowd-funding” effort by citizens from all over Europe. You will find on it a collection of music, movies, and books dear to our heart and created with the same passion of sharing and reusing cultural works, and promoting such practices. This is the way culture is made today!

We hope these works will help you understand that it is urgent that the cultural practices enabled by digital technologies be encouraged rather than repressed, through a deep positive reform of copyright.

“Everyone has the right freely to participate in the cultural life of the community, to enjoy the arts and to share in scientific advancement and its benefits.”

Article 27.1, Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Happy viewing, listening, reading... and remixing!
